PANEL TITLE:
TOOL TYPOLOGY AND TECHNOLOGY: NEW APPROACHES

CONVENOR: DR. DEBASIS KUMAR MONDAL

ABSTRACT

Study of tool typology and technology is the primary marker of prehistoric cultures. Thus, it is important to study the typology and technology of prehistoric tools to understand the survival strategy of the prehistoric humans as well as past industry, assemblages, society, and culture. Different new typologies and technologies of making stone tools have been added to the study of prehistoric cultures. New nomenclatures have been evolved and some older typologies discarded or renamed. The focus of the present panel is the study of changes of typology and technology of making stone tools and its regional variations and position in world prehistory.
